

John-Christian Bourque

Senior Consultant, StrategyCorp, StrategyCorp Inc.

J.C. Bourque has nearly a decade of experience in the political, public policy, and business strategy realms in Ontario and specializes in providing clients with advanced political, public policy, privatization, and business advice. At StrategyCorp Business Services, J.C. offers business strategy experience and rigour, combined with political and public policy acumen. This skill set offers public and private sector clients in regulated or government facing industries a needed bridge between business strategy and political and public policy savvy.

Prior to joining StrategyCorp Business Advisory Services, J.C. worked in political and public policy risk management. During this time, he devised and managed policy strategies for clients involved in energy, economic development, and privatization. He also developed and implemented media and legislative strategies as well as worked on several political campaigns. J.C. also spent two years in senior communications and policy roles at the Ontario legislature, advising the Leader of the Official Opposition in a number of capacities. In Kabul, Afghanistan, J.C. worked for the mobile telephony arm of the Aga Kahn Development Network working on devising content strategies that would further enable Afghans to communicate with each other and to express themselves. J.C. is currently a lecturer at the Rotman School of Management at the University of Toronto in the area of capital markets and writes for The Globe and Mail on pressing business and public policy topics.

J.C. holds a Master's of Science from the London School of Economics and a Masters of Business Administration from the University of Toronto.
